

Prostate Cancer 2009

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of every six men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year. In August of 2008, the University of California-Davis Cancer Center released findings of a study that found higher rates of prostate cancer among veterans. Twice as many Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange have developed the disease, are diagnosed 2 ½ years younger, and are nearly four times more likely to develop more aggressive forms of cancer compared to those who were not exposed.

Theragenics Corporation is a leader in the prostate cancer treatment market, having treated over 100,000 men since 1987, and is committed to educating men about proven treatment options for prostate cancer. In 2009, they've enlisted the help of Eric L. Haney, CSM (Ret.), former Combat Infantryman, a Ranger, Vietnam veteran, founding operator of Delta Force and co-creator of CBS television's 'The Unit' to work with them in making sure that military men throughout the country know their options when it comes to fighting prostate cancer.

Eric Haney

Eric Haney had a twenty year military career and served his country during the Vietnam War. He has since worked privately throughout the Middle East and Latin America, protecting presidents, princes, and CEOs. He wrote a book about his experiences in Delta Force. He's worked as a guest analyst and commentator on many major networks and currently is responsible for bringing the television hit, The Unit to CBS.

In addition, Theragenics has teamed with the Honor Flight Organization and is a 2009 sponsor of 10 Honor Flights allowing 400+ veterans (plus families and guardians) to visit the National WWII Memorial in Washington, DC. Mr. Haney will be a participant as a guardian on some of these flights. Many of the veterans on these flights, all currently from World War II require help and special attention while making the trip. Each veteran has a guardian accompanying them. To date, many of those guardians have been Vietnam War veterans.
